

NICOLE Workshop
The impact of EU-directives on the management of contaminated land
Do we have to start site remediation all over again?

Date: 1 and 2 December 2005

Venue: Tower Hotel, Cagliari, Sardinia, Italy

The last couple of years miscellaneous EU-directives were initiated, which could potentially have a significant impact on contaminated land management in the future. The “Van de Walle-case” is an example of how the EU Waste Directive can influence dramatically the way that contaminated land was dealt with so far.

The NICOLE members expressed that this issue is of first priority for their organisations.

The aim of this workshop is

- 1) to inform and explain to the participants of the workshop what the miscellaneous impacts mean to the management of contaminated land
- 2) to give the opportunity for a dialogue between stakeholders and regulators

The workshop includes a special session organised by the Common Forum on Contaminated Land – a European network of national regulators.
